

BIG CUT IN PRINT PAPER URGED UPON PUBLISHERS

Colver Says Voluntary Reduction By Large Consumers Is Remedy for Shortage.

Voluntary reduction of news print consumption by publishers is the primary remedy of the paper shortage, Chairman Colver, of the Federal Trade Commission, said yesterday before the House Ways and Means Committee. Publishers of big papers, despite agreements among themselves, have not practiced the economy that is necessary, he added.

"The publishers must recognize that they are consuming more than is and can be produced," said Mr. Colver.

"The size of papers is hardly a subject of legislation," he continued, urging smaller Sunday editions and the elimination of extra editions.

Repeal of the excess profits tax and removal of all tariff on news print also were suggested by Mr. Colver as remedies. He said the shortage trouble began with the excess profits tax, encouraging unusually large expenditures for advertising as a means of evading the tax.

"Smaller publishers are most hurt," declared Mr. Colver, "because the larger publishers are keeping paper from them by taking paper on contract."

The contract price, he declared, averages 4 1/2 cents, and the current market price is about 9 cents. The cost of producing paper on April 1, 1918, was 2.8 cents a pound, but has increased materially since then, Mr. Colver said. No increase in production, through new mills, to equal the increased consumption was in sight, he continued.

"The production of all grades of news print for 1919 was greater than any preceding year. The increase over 1918 was almost 10 per cent. The stocks of news print on hand at the paper mills decreased materially from the beginning of 1917 to the end of 1919. The stocks of total news print paper reported in the mills on January 1, 1917, amounted to 35,995 tons, whereas the stocks on December 31, 1919, amounted to only 35,369 tons."

YACHT PARTY GOES DRY AS "MACHINERY" LEAKS

Consignment for Florida Sportsmen
Seized by Prohibition Officers in Atlanta.

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 30.—Somewhere along the Florida coast, soothing dreams of a "party to be pitched" have given way to fervent denunciation of all persons prohibitionally inclined; somewhere in that same vicinity thirty yachtsmen are wetting parched palates with grape juice that has no "kick," somewhere anxious sportsmen are scanning the heavy waves for a sight of the "machinery" that failed to arrive.

"Somewhere" in the Federal building, in the space occupied by the office of the chief prohibition officer, the box that would have brought repose to the souls of the sea riders is reposing. Labeled as "machinery parts," and billed to a Miami, Fla. yacht captain, the heavy box arrived in Atlanta and had already started to its final destination when suddenly a golden stream—reminiscent of the "good old days" rather than machinery grease—trickled from the box.

A prohibition enforcement officer was called into consultation and here's what was found: Three cases of Scotch, age unknown, and one case of Italian wine. The "joy juice" was turned over to the base hospital at Fort McPherson for medicinal use.
